

The City Legal Information Group

Australian Legal Research

Monday 5th October 2015, 6pm

Ever struggled when having to find an Australian case or piece of legislation? Worse still, ever had to manually track a case through the courts? Then the City Legal Information Group has the session for you. Come listen to Sue Ann Yap and Michael Green from JADE, a non-profit legal research citator service, discuss the significance of open access to law, practitioner-based research flow and being a disrupted + disruptive practitioner.

They will consider some of the big questions facing us all and give us a brief insight in to the approach being taken 'Down Under'. Questions such as:

- The changing face of the Legal Librarian
- Current awareness versus reporters: is now more important than yesterday?
- The power of collaboration and open access to information

Networking drinks will be available afterwards for further discussion.
